* Give yourself a good laugh with my 9-minute appearance to plug the book on the Mike Douglas Show 45 years ago. It ended with Mike Douglas, Tony (Tie a Yellow Ribbon) Orlando, and me carrying the comedienne Totie Fields out of a “burning building.”

I also worked with economist Walter H. Diamond for twenty years and until his recent death as researcher and contributing editor on the following financial subscription services:

CAPITAL FORMATION AND INVESTMENT INCENTIVES AROUND THE WORLD, published by Oceana Publications
TAX-FREE TRADE ZONES OF THE WORLD,
Published by Matthew Bender
FOREIGN TAX AND TRADE BRIEFS,
Published by Matthew Bender
INTERNATIONAL DOUBLE TAXATION TREATIES,
Published by Oxford University Press

For nine years (1991-1999) I wrote a monthly column on international trade and investments for Syracuse University's School of Management and for the Offshore Institute, as well as for the semi-monthly newsletter International Trade and Finance published by Informa UK Ltd. For several years I also annotated international double-taxation treaties for Oxford University Press.

Much of my professional life has been in the travel industry: In 1958 I co-organized all the domestic and international group travel (8 special trains, 500 chartered buses, 18,000 car pools, 2 chartered ships, and 65 chartered planes) to the largest religious convention ever held in New York City (250,000 attended the main event.); organized the first travel agency to be owned by a department store (Dayton's in Minneapolis/St. Paul, now Target); organized and marketed special-interest group tours to Europe, the UK, Kenya, Tanzania, Nigeria, Swaziland, India, Egypt, Hawaii, Mexico, and Thailand for medical doctors, nurses, psychiatrists, zoologists, students, unionists, photographers, teachers, firemen, and art collectors; and organized and personally escorted a group of 60 on a luxury tour of the Mediterranean in 1967 and escorted another group of 60 on one of the first group visits to China in 1973. I have traveled to more than 45 countries.

In 1990, as President of the Association for World Free Trade Zones, I led an official delegation to Japan (that included Dr. Frank Owarish of the United Nations Institute for Training and Research and John daPont of the U.S. Department of Commerce) that persuaded the Japanese government to authorize 22 Foreign Access Zones throughout the country as a way of addressing the troubling trade imbalance by facilitating imports. I then traveled the length of Japan, lecturing business leaders and government officials on the benefits of trade zones. I conducted a seminar and organized a conference on free trade zones at the UN, and hosted several luncheons at the UN for groups visiting from overseas. I organized and escorted a group of Japanese businessmen on a tour of U.S. trade zones in New Jersey, Brooklyn, Baltimore, Dallas, and San Francisco. In behalf of Japan's Ministry of International Trade and Industry, I visited and reported on trade zones in Hamburg, Germany; LeHavre, France; Barcelona, Spain; Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic; and Kingston, Jamaica.

As the president of the Japan-based World Watching Society, I was instrumental in obtaining the financing for the conversion of an ancient family-owned castle in Tibet into a school for homeless children who are being taught the traditional arts and crafts of Tibet, a project organized by Dr. Hans Guggenheim.

Dr. Hans Guggenheim and I organized a reverse trade mission for the island of Mauritius, that included an exhibition of Mauritian arts and crafts, as well as other products, in Boston, while the Mauritian deputy prime minister, the minister of finance, and other officials were busy attending four days of meetings with government officials, academics, and business leaders in Boston and New York.

As a consultant, I have worked with clients in Spain, Poland, the Netherlands, Japan, Mauritius, Peru, Bolivia, Dominican Republic, Switzerland, Kenya, Greece, Comoros, and the U.S.

Presently my efforts are focused on the development of The Coalescence website (www.thecoalescence.net) dedicated to the promotion and celebration of “the great coming together of all humanity” and to the organization of the R. Buckminster Fuller-inspired Whole Earth Design Project (www.design.thecoalescence.net), the objective of which is to design, in cyberspace, an ecologically and environmentally sustainable economic system capable of providing every individual on the planet with all of life's essentials as a template for the reorganization of the economic system in the real world.
